Fourth of Funds Go for Military

By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, April 7 (NYT),-The Soviet Union disclosed today that its military establishment was absorbing as much as onefourth of all the funds available for growth of the nation's econ-

This unusual information on the magnitude of the defense burden was contained in the published text of an economic report delivered yesterday by Premier Alexei N. Kosygin before the current congress of the Soviet Communist party.

The congress is expected to wind up its discussions tomorrow. It appeared to be one of the most forthright acknowledgments by a Soviet politician of the economic effect of the maintenance of the country's armed

Equal Expenditures

The Soviet Union is generally assumed to shoulder defense expenditures roughly equivalent to those of the United States. However, because the Soviet national product is only about one-half that of the United States, the share of the military-oriented sector of the Soviet economy is about twice as large as the share of the defense establishment in the American economy.

Mr. Kosygin's disclosure. made in the context of new national income statistics, appeared to be part of an effort by the Soviet leadership to justify the current economic policy of a better deal for the consumer combined with continued emphasis on heavy industry and defense.

Leonid I. Brezhnev, the party leader, appeared to go out of his way in his keynote speech to the congress last week in affirming that increased attention to consumer welfare in the new fiveyear plan "does not mean that we are slackening our concern for heavy industry," which is the basis of the defense effort.

In disclosing the share of national income that is taken up by military activities. Mr. Kosygin said:

"The Soviet state in the present international situation must be steadfastly concerned with strengthening of the country's defense capability. Over the last five years 80 billion rubles has been spent for defense" The figure itself was not new, for it represented the total budget allocations in 1966-70 for the maintenance of military person-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

9 Republican Senators' Plea to Nixon

Vietnam Pullout Schedule Urged

By Chalmers M. Roberts

WASHINGTON, April 7 (WP). -President Nixon ought to give America and the rest of the world some firm idea of the end U.S. involvement in Vietnam his speech tonight. That was the message nine Republican senators took to Defense Secretary Melvin Laird Monday

But they did not insist that the president actually set a date for final withdrawal.

The President was to speak on television and radio at 9 p.m. (0200 GMT Thursday).

The nine senators dined with Mr. Laird at the home of Sen. Jacob Javits of New York. Others inclured Republican Senate leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania. George Aiken of Vermont, John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, and Charles Percy of Illinois.

Senators present said the group was unanimous in or Laird with their view that "more numbers," meaning merely an announcement of troop withdrawals over a period of months beginning May 1, would not do.

adamant in his refusal to set a firm date for a final and total American withdrawal. The senstors Monday avoided pressing for such a date, they reported, stressing instead the need for a statement of intention to withdraw totally without conditions.

Sen. Aiken yesterday in a radio interview noted that withdrawals recently have jumped from the average of 12,500 men a month to around 18,000. From that he drew hope that the higher level could become the norm in coming months.

But Defense Department spokesman Jerry Friedheim said the withdrawal pace always has run higher at the end of a with-drawal period. In the current case, the period ending May 1, the speedup is necessary because of a slowdown in withdrawals in late December and January in anticipation of a possible Communist offensive. The current troop level is about 200,000 men in Indochina, not counting thousands more off shore in the Seventh Fleet and the Air Force in Thailand. Administration sources have said the President has been thinking of a residual force in Vietnam of around 50.000. It is such talk of a residual force, as in South Korea, rather than total withdrawal, which has produced the growing clamor for some sign from the President that he intends to pull out all forces.

The invasion of Laos and the court-martial conviction of Lt. William Calley have fueled the calls for withdrawal.

"will be if political expediency dictates the compromise of such fundamental moral principle as the inherent unlawfulness of the murder of innocent persons." Instead of releasing Lt. Calley from the stockade at Fort Benning, Ga., after his conviction and sentencing for the premeditated murder of 22 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, the Army captein said, the President should have defended the six officers who found Lt. Calley guilty. The White House acknowledged

Release Ordered

Mr. Nixon ordered Lt. Calley released from the stockade at Fort Benning and to remain under house arrest at his quarters on the post while the automatic review and, if necessary, later appeal processes take place. After receiving more than 50,000 letters from the public, almost all of them protesting the lieutenant's conviction and sentencing, the White House announced on Sat-urday that Mr. Nixon intended to make the final determination on both issues.

Capt, Daniel reminded Mr. Nixon that he had stated in the past that it appeared the events at My Lai were "certainly a massacre" and the prosecutor "Your decision can only have been prompted by the response of a vocal segment of our population, who-while no doubt acting in good faith-cannot be aware of the evidence which has resulted in Lt. Calley's conviction."

In the four-page, single letter, Capt. Daniel asked Mr. Nixon if he knew what impact his intervention in the proceedings might have on the six courtmartial jurors, and said:

"It would seem to me to be more appropriate for you as the President to have said something in their behalf and to remind the nation of the purpose of our legal system and the respect it should command."

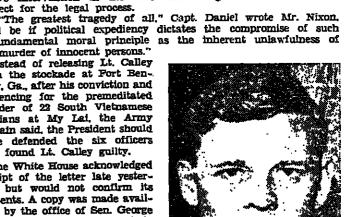

Pleas Meaningless The captain said that he would have expected the President to support "the law of this land on a moral issue which is so clear and about which there can be no compromise. For this nation," he continued, "to condone" the acts of Lt. Calley is to make us no better than our enemies and make any pleas by this nation for the humane treatment of our own prisoners meaningless."

Ron Ziegler, the White House press secretary, declined to say whether the President had seen the letter. However, he confirmed that it had been received in the White House mail yesterday. White House spokesmen refer-

Congressmen Sue Nixon to End Fighting

WASHINGTON, April 7 (AP1.-Three Democratic congressmen sued President Nixon today in an effort to have the Vietnam war declared illegal.

They brought suit in U.S. District Court seeking an order that the war be stopped in 60 days unless Congress declares war.

Michael Harrington of Massachusetts, contend that the executive branch of the government is acting illegally in waging war and that they as members of Congress have been denied their constitutional right to declare

The action is an attempt to get the Supreme Court to rule on the legality of the war in Indochina, something it repeatedly has re fused to do.

"Article I, Section 8, Clause II of the United States Constitution states in clear and unequivocal language that Congress shall have the power to declare war," the congressmen said. "Congress has not exercised that power.

"It has passed no legislation or joint resolution declaring war in Indochina, nor has it explicitly, intentionally and discreetly authorized the war."

By prosecuting the war without such a declaration, the suit claims, the President and other executive branch officials "unlawfully impair and defeat plaintiffs' constitutional rights as members of the Congress of the United States to decide whether the United States should fight a war."

Rep. Rosenthal, Rep. Mitchell and Rep. Harrington want the stop fighting the war unless within 60 days Congress authorizes it in the proper constitutional manner

Biggest Pacification Plan Starts

By Tad Szulc . WASHINGTON, April 7 (NYT).

The most ambitious and costly pacification program yet planned for South Vietnam has been put into effect by Saigon and Wash-Reportedly costing the United States considerably more than $1 billion and Saigon an undisclosed sum, the 1971 Community Defense and Local Development Plan would greatly expand paci-fication activities, which are aimed at destroying Communist subversive forces and widening self-government and development. The 304-page plan a copy of which was made available to The New York Times, lists as the "top priority" for the year the "neutralization" of the entrenched Viet Cong political apparatus.

Already in operation since March 1, and endorsed by the American Command in Salgon, the new plan is reportedly the subject of wide controversy among U.S. officials, some of whom term it unrealistic and artificial.

Administration officials were unable to provide cost figures to the United States for previous pacification programs. But they said that the current plan, fiof the principles inspiring the Gonella report-"a greater awarenanced almost entirely in its military security and civilian aspects by the Defense Departness of human dignity and freement and the Central Intelligence Agency, was much more costly because of its increased However, the premier called on Vatican to concentrate on

Acknowledging for the first time that the activities of the Viet Cong apparatus remain a major problem in eight of South Vietnam's 44 provinces, including four in the allegedly pacified Mekong River Delta, and that South Vietnamese forces often prefer to "accommodate, rather than resist, the enemy," the plan provides for:

 Expansion of the People's Self-Defense Force—the civilian anti-guerrilla combat organization in rural areas-from 500,000 to four million. Women would be enlisted in combat units and children of both sexes over the age of seven in supporting units.

The plan also seeks to complete the program of holding elections in all villages and hamlets: spur Going to China land reform by setting a goal of distributing nearly a million acres of land to farmers, and widen, social benefits. This could be done by providing new assistance to 216,000 war veterans, and in-creasing aid to 43,002 disabled soldiers, 33,743 parents of dead and 284,020 war orphans. Mr. Hoover has not issued a public statement on the controversy, but speaking through Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, he denied yesterday that the FBI has even tapped the phone of a congress-

Mr. Klendienst echoed the denial and said that Mr. Hoover sent an agent to Rep. Boggs's office yesterday asking for proof, but that the Louisiana Democrat refused to see the agent.

He said congressional investigators would not have access to all FBI files but could be shown "all pertinent information" needed in the investigation.

Mr. Hoover, 76, has been head of the FBI since 1925. When the normal retirement age of 70 arrived. President Lyndon B. Johnson waived the requirement that he step down. President Nixon has continued the waiver.

Mr. Kleindienst was asked if there had been any discussion within the administration recently about Mr. Hoover's retir-

"No. there has not been," he replied vigorously, "and there is no reason to be."

He described Mr. Hoover as an "able, agile, alert and conscien-tious" man who spends long hours on the job.

Mr. Kleindienst said that if Boggs's allegations were true that congressmen's phones had been tapped and members put under surveillance (Rep. Boggs said his "personal line" was under surveillance), then it is against the law.

But he said Rep. Boggs's refusal to see an FBI agent and give him the evidence demonstrated "the faisity of the charges."

These officials say the Navy is now completing a proposal for Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard and for Congress to deal with Grumman's money problem and with a six-month delay in the project caused by the crash Dec. 30 of the first test aircraft during its second flight. Though no final estimate on the exact cost increase has been made, these officials say that "at least $1 million per plane is a reasonable estimate."

Only part of the anticipated cost rise is said to be because of mechanical changes growing out of the crash. The general business crunch that has hit several aerospace firms in recent years has hit Grumman as well. Less new business in the plant than was anticipated at the time of the contract bidding in 1968 is said to have forced up general overhead costs. Inflation has also played a major factor.

Bloodbath in Bengal

Washington's persistent silence on recent events in Pakistan becomes increasingly incomprehensible in the light of mounting eyewitness evidence that the Pakistani Army has engaged in indiscriminate slaughter of civilians and the selective elimination of leadership groups in the separatist state of East Bengal.

A State Department spokesman conceded Tuesday that "we would be concerned if American weapons were used in circumstances such as these." But he insisted that the United States has no first-hand knowledge that American tanks and other weapons are being used. This is sophistry. Only last month the secretary of state, in his annual foreign policy report, noted that this country had agreed to sell additional equipment to the Pakistanis "for their largely U.S.-equipped army."

On any basis, the United States would have a humanitarian duty to speak out against the bloodbath in Bengal. But, as Pakistan's chief arms supplier, this country has a double obligation; to declare its disapproval of the tactics employed and to make clear that no additional American arms-including spare parts-will be sent to Pakistan until this savage repression is America's own interests call for it to do everything possible to help bring a speedy end to a civil conflict that could touch off a chain reaction of communal strife throughout the Indian subcontinent, with grave international implications.

Greatest of Composers

By common consent, Igor Stravinsky was the greatest living composer. He was the last of the heroic group that flourished in the early part of the century-a group that included such composers as Bela Bartok. Sergei Prokofiev, Arnold Schoenberg, Anton Webern, Ralph Vaughan Williams. All of them helped shape the course of music. But of them all there was, in the period from about 1910 to 1940, no shaper like Stravinsky. After his "Petrouchka" of 1911 and his "Sacre du Printemps" of 1913, music could no longer be the same.

For decades one could hear in world music echoes of the famous polytonal chord in "Petrouchka" and the savage rhythmic innovations of "Le Sacre." What Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" was to the last half of the 19th century, "Le Sacre du Printemps' was to the first third of the 20th. No composer, not even the great ones of the period, could escape its influence. Then came Stravinsky's neo-classic period, and again he was the leader in a new kind of musical thought.

In recent years, world music has shifted somewhat from Stravinsky's concepts. That was to be expected, for every age has its own aesthetic. Stravinsky himself embraced the Schoenberg-Webern dodecaphonic theories toward the end of his life. But his greatest work had come earlier. What Stravinsky always will represent in music is craft, technique, logic, proportion, rhythm. Above all rhythm.

One of the most personal and idiosyncratic of all composers, a creator with unusual intellectual strength, an orchestra technician par excellence, he was in his day the most modern of the moderns. The man himself was like his music-terse, pithy, possessed of a steel-trap mind and a tart tongue. His witty, often malicious aperçus make delightful reading. Stravinsky was a seminal figure, and that alone attests to his strength and assures his immortality. No minor composer in history has ever put his mark on the age. Only the major ones do.

Heath's Travels

Spring is lovely in Paris, and that's where Mr. Edward Heath ought to be, for the West Germans can't help us to get into the Common Market. Nothing happens inside the Common Market without the French agreeing. By playing hard to get, Mr. Heath will only strengthen President Pompidou's suspicion that Britain is not serious about Britain and France must speak directly and plainly to each other at the highest level. For after ten years and two shattering rebuis we still do not know what France really intends. The poor British public is still in the dark. We have decimal money. we are moving over to the European valueadded tax. At this rate we shall be driving on the right and nibbling Continental breakfasts with nothing to show for it.

-From the Daily Mail (London). * * *

Mr. Heath has chosen his visit to West Germany to raise the level of debate about Britain's entry into the European Common Market. He was undoubtedly right to do so. For too long now the Brussels discussions have centered on technical details and there has been a real danger that sight would be lost of the great political issues at stake. Britain's financial contribution to the Community's budget, New Zealand's dairy exports, and Caribbean sugar are all problems of great importance, for which satisfactory solutions must be found if Britain is to become a member. But the will to find these solutions will go by default if the governments, parliaments and peoples involved in the negotiations believe that British membership does not have much wider implications, both for this country and an enlarged community. —From the Financial Times (London).

* * * It needs to be emphasized that Britain is not seeking any special favors here or any other member of the Six. Britain has accepted the rules and regulations of the Community. What is under discussion is the transition period, under which a prospective member adjusts to the new system. As Mr. Heath pointed out Tuesday, Britain has made its proposals clear and it is now up to the Six to give their answer.

This answer will, as he said, require a great effort from the Six. And it is in this internal debate of the Community, intricate and technical as it so often is, that Germany's influence needs to be brought to bear. It is essential that the Six act in a generous spirit, that is in the wider European interest, and not in any narrow, selfish way. Herr Brandt, who saw enlargement of the Community as its overriding objective when the Six met at The Hague to decide their future, is the statesman to instill this spirit.

Pakistan's Civil War

Probably the outside world can marshal a strong opinion against the senseless killing that is going on, even if it abstains from passing judgment on the merits of the political positions of the warring halves. Simply because we, too, are humans, we cannot simply watch the Pakistanis kill each other. We have to persuade them to come to terms short of force of arms. -From the Manila Bulletin.

Chile's Elections

When the world's first democratically elected Marxist state appeared in Chile under President Allende five months ago-on a one-third minority vote with sporting assistance from the anti-Marxist Christian Democrats-the big question was how long it would remain democratic. Paradoxical though it may appear, the near 50 percent endorsement that Dr. Allende has now achieved in local elections increases the case for misgivings. It is clear that, hampered by existing institutions in his crash program for a "people's democracy," he was looking to these election results to provide what he would interpret as a mandate to seek wider powers in a plebiscite. Even without special powers Dr. Allende has moved

NEW YORK.—In the ten years since John F. Since New York State's liberal-ized abortion law went into effect last July 1, Gordon Chase, New York City's health-services administrator, reports that 97,881 legal abortions have taken place in New York City alone, over half of them on women from out

This steep rise in the abortion rate brought from the 30 Roman State a warning in a pastoral letter that "the church disowns by immediate excommunication any Catholic who deliberately procures an abortion or helps someone else to do so."

The letter condemned "abortionists" and "their death-dealing trade" and added: "They even advertise their monstrous commerce beyond the confines of the state, thus making New York the abortion capital of America."

Sen, Edmund Muskie, the leading Democratic candidate for the presidency, and himself a Roman Catholic, was the first to react to the political implications of this issue, and was soon followed by President Nixon himself.

Draws a Distinction

Muskie took the opportunity in an interview with David Frost on the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company's network to draw a distinction between his support of birth control as a means of family planning and his anxiety over legalized abortion after the first six weeks of pregnancy. He said he believed in birth control. thought people ought to have government information on the subject so that they could make their own decisions, and added that he hoped the Pope's next encyclical on birth control takes a more liberal attitude toward the birth control "pill."

"The question of abortion does trouble me," he said. "I suppose it's related to my religious training or my church training, but I think it's broader than that. I'm concerned about diluting in any way the concept of the sanctity of life. . . .

JOHN CAMPBELL.

The Calley-Nixon scandal with respect to American war crimes in Vietnam points out the intolerable situation of investigation, prosecution and jurisdiction of war crimes in American law at present. The military (including the President as commander-inchief) are the sole judges as to whether war crimes may have been committed, whether an in-vestigation is to be made, whether prosecution is sought or quashed, whether the judgment of a court is accepted or not. The obnoxious thing is that the President, before the appeal process has even be-gun, announces that he reserves to himself the ultimate decision regarding the guilt and sentence of someone convicted of war

Both those who morally con demn this particular war and those who justify it ought to agree that the rule of law must be sustained and strengthened over the activities of the U.S. military in wartime. A big step forward in doing this would be to take war crimes investigation, prosecution and jurisdiction away from the military and out of the reach of the President! What the United States now urgently needs is what the Allies forced on the Federal Republic of Germany: (I) an independent federal agency to investigate and prosecute war crimes, and (2) civilian jurisdiction of war-crimes cases, with built-in guarantees that the courts would be free both from military and executive influence and pressure.

I was interested in Mrs. Julian Peck's letter of April 5 regarding Lt. Calley. In one sentence, she dismisses the admitted fact of his killing bables on the ground that in the U.S. some abortions are legal. Is this really an apt parallel? Or a justification? I'm not going to argue abortion, pro or con. I'm interested in Calley and what he represents to us Americans. Agreed, he's a scapegoat, a sacrifice to public opinion—in two directions now that Mr. Nixon has pulled him from jail to mollify the very voters he previously was put on trial supposedly to mollify. The fact remains, this man killed babies. And toothless old women. And frail-looking old

Today, the opposition joined in. The extreme-right Alliance Républicaine issued a statement siying that the "republican order, the national currency and French education are in danger." most extreme of the Gaullist groups, the Committee for the Defense of the Republic, called for an immediate "affirmation of the national will to put an end to this state of things,"

L'Humanité, the Communist newspaper, called it all an "orchestrated campaign" by the gov-ernment that would lead to sup-pression not only of student leftists, but also of the political left and unions Sources at the Education Ministry do not hide their concern over the situation in both high schools and colleges. They feel that the students are being led by a small group of Maoistsoften professors—whose jobs are protected by law. They feel that Macists were behind the demonstrations leading to the closing of Normale Supérieure.

The criticism directed against Mr. Chaban-Delmas, even from within his own party, is not new, but recently has taken a different form. Several Gaullists openly have criticized him for lack of leadership, whereas a year ago they criticized him for trying to compete with President Georges Pompidou.

Reports Circulate

Several unusual reports have been circulating in usually well-informed circles indicating that the prime minister was fed up with his amorphous position sandwiched in between president and party and lacking authority with both

The prime minister did not reply to his critics yesterday, but said he would answer them in the major speech before the Na-tional Assembly April 20.

Curiously, the government issued a statement following today's cabinet meeting indicating that Mr. Pompidou had directed all-members of the government to offer the prime minister "suggestions" for the speech. His preceding addresses to the Assembly have been of his own design.

It seems clear that most of the "suggestions" will be to increase police action. Interior Minister Raymond Marcellin said last week that both Mr. Pompidou and he desire a "hardenges that they participated in ing" of law enforcement to deal with the growing disorder.

Iranian General Critically Hurt in Ambush at Home

TEHRAN, April 7 (Reuters) .-Maoist guerrillas today machinegunned and critically wounded Gen. Ziaoddin Farsio, chairman of Iran's military tribunals, while he was leaving his house with his 16-year-old son, government officials reported.

The boy was also injured, but not seriously. The gunmen fired from a car, then raced off. Officials here linked the attack with a pro-Chinese Communist guerrilla network that was recently smashed in northern Iran.

Two members of the ring were killed recently in a gunbattle with police units. Thirteen were shot by firing squad under orders approved by Gen. Farsio. Fifty more people are under arrest awaiting trial.

But five gang members managed to escape and are believed to have staged the attack today. Gen. Farsio also is the army's former prosecutor. In that post, he had obtained at least one death sentence.

Huge Oil Leak

Ship Sunk in Channel Source of Pollution

LONDON, April 7 (AP).-The British government reported to-night that large quantities of oil are leaking from a sunken ship in the English Channel threatening to pollute southeast coast beaches for the Easter holidays. Royal Navy and Royal Air Force craft were ordered into action with fishing trawlers and coast guard vessels in an effort to disperse the oil, which is threatening a 75-mile stretch of coast from Ramsgate to Eastbourne. Cross-Channel ferries and hovercraft reported slicks in the Strait of Dover, stretched all the way across to the French coast. The Department of Trade and Industry said it had established definitely that the oil was coming from one of three ships that sank in "death lane" in the Dover 'Strait in January and February with the loss of at least 39 lives.

The ministry did not state which of the three ships was leaking the oil.

By tonight, some oil was being dashed against the Dover seawall. Some small beaches near the port were already fouled. The ministry said coast guard helicopter pilots reported the oil was bubbling up from the spot off the Varna Shoals where on Jan, 11 the tanker Texaco Caribbean blew up and sank after a collision. Less than 28 hours later, the West German freighter Brandenburg plowed into the wreckage of the tanker and sank. to be followed by the Greek freighter Niki on Feb. 27. A ministry spokesman said it had been definitely established that the oil did not come from the Liberian tanker Panther, which was pulled off the Goodwin Sands further north last Sunday after a six-day tussle.

A Southampton firm, contracted to blow up the three wrecks. denied the ministry statement that the oil was leaking from

Music in France_

At Royan, Modern Works From East Europe

By David Stevens

ROYAN, France, April 7.—The avant-garde music of Eastern Europe is the basic theme of the seven heavily scheduled days of porary Art. which is now jarring this Atlantic-coast resort town to seasonal life.

Every contemporary festival is to some extent a trip into the unknown, and that aspect is emphasized here this year because, to varying degrees, this kind of music lives in something of an artistic ghetto in Communist countries, in contrast to the favored position the modernists have enjoyed since the war in Western Europe.

But at the same time there are plenty of known quantities. Poland and Yugoslavia have long been open to the post-Webern winds from the West, and many of the composers from those countries have been spending some or all of their time in the West and speak the same musical language with little or no nation-

The U.S.S.R.

But the Soviet Union remains a stronghold of ideological direction in the arts, so one of the programs that attracted a large and interested audience was the recital by a young and lovely Soviet pianist, Irina Ermakova, who played works by four of her compatriots.

According to the information available here, none of the composers on her program is over io. three of the four are themselves pianists citself a great Russian tradition, and three of the four are said to be members of the Union of Soviet Composers. the guardian of official priorities in music, although none is known to a large public in Russia, let alone elsewhere.

The four works heard hereby Victor Suslin, Alexander Rabinovich, Alfred Schnitke and Sofia Gubaidulina—were more interesting than those usually sent officially abroad by Moscow to represent contemporary Russian music. Yet, despite the use of certain modern devices, they were all recognizably Rus-sian—Miss Gubaidulina's Sonata No. 2 being particularly striking in its Prokofiev-like vitality.

This impression was seconded by the first performance of her "Concordanza." part of a pro-gram given by the Prague encemble Musica Viva Pragensis, a group of ten outstanding string. and and percussion players that was created about ten years ago and has traveled extensively in Western Europe, although at home it apparently performs more for radio and recordings than in the concert hall. The rest of the ensemble's program-including work by its directors. Zbynek Vortrak and Marek Kopelent -included some rather dry excursions into combining taped and live segments. The audience seemed particularly to enjoy Kelement's piece for actress, film, tape, lighting and instrumental ensemble, which relied more on movement and a semi-theatrical atmosphere than on music for

But the most remarkable event of the festival's opening days. under the title of "Free Jazz," was the introduction of lazz to the Rovan program for the first time, and in a highly unusual

What the orchestra played, a creation of Silva's called "My Country," went on for two and a half hours without an intermission. Almost all the audience was there to cheer at the end, and occasionaly during the marathon. The orchestra has most of tile standard jazz instruments. but its basic sound is determin-ed by three bass fiddles 'alternately plucked and bowed, and seven saxophonists playing a total of a dozen saxes ranging from sepranino down to baritone. players had before them. Occasionally he loped from one place to another to play a harp, a xylophone, a violin (held between his legs and played with a bass-fiddle bow, or to activate a couple of amplified electronic noise producers.

Super Session

The result was a kind of super jam session, whose basic contents would have been familiar to any jazz lover in a mixture of composed and improvisational elements. And there was a def-inite ebb and flow from massive crescendos to extended solos by some very accomplished performers (the first, a dazzling flight on the piccolo by Becky Friend, the orchestra's only girl, did not come until an hour had gone by) to some elaborate wind

The time seemed to flow by easily for most of the audience. One of the bass players, who almost never stopped, said afterward that on a good night he'

out feeling it until the session was over. Ferhaps another of the answers is to be found in the reply by one of the sax players, at an overly serious formal dis-cussion the next day, to the question of what this group's music owed to bebop.

"There are more important questions," said the musician, such as what kind of life there is on other planets or what other realities there are besides the one most people live in."

Roger Blin's Tour de Force

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS. April 7.—Roger Blin is a director of exceptional vision. Judging from the available cvidence, he must be the most perceptive play reader in

It was he who brought Samuel Beckett into the theater, giving "En Attendant Godot" its initial production (in 1952 at the Theatre de Babylonei. Only he saw the stage possibilities in Genet's "Les Paravents," which, in manuscript was so lengthy and meandering that it would have required seven hours to perform. Blin prepared an acting version of the sprawling text and mounted it memorably at the Théatre de France. It proved the outstanding event of the Parisian theater in the 1960s as the production of "En Attendant Godot" had been the most famous production of the 1950s.

Three seasons ago Blin happened on a macabre Cuban melodrama, "Les Nonnes" by Manet, and made it into a fascinating spectacle. Now, taking another play of Cuban autho Nuit des Assassins" by Jose Triana, he has worked strange magic upon it at the Théatre

The play is not new here. It was performed by a Havana company (in Spanish) at the Théâtre des Nations festival not long ago. Obviously inspired by Genet's "Les Bonnes." it is a dark tale of smoldering resentments and thwarted desires. In a dusty attic, three adolescents—two girls and a boy-act out their brid dreams which culminate with the simulated murder of their par-

The script, keyed monotonously in the range of high hysteria, is basically nothing but a neo-Grand Guignol shocker elongated. But Blin, sensing its theatrical potentials, lifted it out and above itself, so to speak, dramatizing the situations compellingly. The air is electric with hatred, as the children, depicting their elders, dispute, rage and put one another on mock trial. Blin has succeeded in maintaining suspense through the two long acts. From his three young players-Michèle Moretti, Hermine Karagheuz and Francis Huster—he has drawn performances remarkable for their : biding high tension. The result of his directorial artistry and invention is a smashing tour de force.

Blin is a disciple of the great Antonin Artaud, whom he served as an assistant. He practices in his productions what his master MILAN. April 7.—Alban Berg's Now they have been replaced for "Wozzeck" is not a rarity in a second series of performances Italian opera houses, but it is not exactly a repertory work, either. Its first performance in Italy was at the Rome Opera, in 1942, where artistic director and conductor Tullio Scrafin courageously mounted it, despite Berg's position as a "degenerate" artist banned by Italy's Nazi allies. After the war. "Wozzeck" was done first in Naples (in 1949), and then finally at La Scala, under Mitropoulos, in 1952.

All these productions were in Italian translation (starring Tito Gobbi, in a superb interpreta-tion). Now, at last, "Wozzeck" has arrived at La Scala in the original German text. The first performances, a week or more ago, were sung by Gerd Nienstedt (in the title role) and the highlyapplauded Evelyn Lear (Marie).

Rolling Stones Sign With U.S. Company

LONDON, April 7 (OPI) — Mick Jagger and Kinney Services Inc. announced today they have reached agreement granting the U.S. company worldwide rights to recordings by the Rolling Stones to be released under the label of the British rock band.

Sources close to the Rolling Stones said the agreement in-volved several million dollars but declined to discuss the exact a second series of performances by baritone Tony Blankenheim and the young unknown American soprano Alexandra Hunt. Miss Hunt is apparently a discovery of La Scala's musical director, Claudio Abbado, who is conducting this "Wozzeck." On the basis of this debut hearing. one would suspect that she is a valuable find. The voice is small, whitish, but she is an accurate musician and a moving actress. In the Bible-reading scene, just before Marie's death, she was particularly, touchingly effective: and her fragile prettiness made her an excellent foll for Blankenheim's massive, earth-bound (and equally moving) soldier. Abbado has been heard at La Scala chiefly in the Italian repertory ("Lucia." the "Barber,"

"Don Carlos"): a previous venture into the 20th century—Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex"—did not lead to happy results. This "Wozzeck." however, was impressive. At the opposite pole from Böhm's familiarly warm, almost romantic conception. Abbado gave us a stark, essential reading that was still profoundly human. The orchestra was clear, precise, and restrained; the vast Scala actually seemed— and sounded like—a chamber theater.

The production was designed by Prague's Josef Svoboda, and like all his productions, the sets largely determined the staging signed, in this case, by Karel Jernek). The lower half of the sides of the stage were covered with a metallic mirroring material. Above this reflecting screen, projections—clouds, brick wall, a pocked lunar landscape—could be seen. At one point, the rear mirrors became magically transparent, to reveal the Drum Major, leading his band. Only the barest props were used. Marie's bed, a door, the doctor's chair. The mirror-walls frequently created a feeling of broad, empty spaces, a desolation that framed and deepened the drama.

As usual, much attention was given to the smaller roles. Her-bert Handt was outstanding as. the Captain, and Josef Hopferwieser was a good Andres.

> official reserve transactions' re-leased by U.S. authorities showed a surplus for 1969 of $2.7 hillion and for 1970 a record deficit of $10.7 billion.

"Thus this shows a worsening not less than $13.5 billion. Against this, the official 'liquidity halance' for 1969 shows a deficit of $7 billion and for 1970 a deficit of $4.7 billion for an improvement of $2.3 billion [not including special drawing rights]."

Neither a True Picture

Neither the "sensational" deterioration shown by one set of figures nor the improvement shown by the other gives a true picture of the basic tendency, the bank charged. When short-term capital movements are ignored, it said, the basic balance shows a deficit of about $3 billion to $3.5 billion yearly in 1969 and in 1970,

"The only slight improvement of the basic tendency of the American payments balance is especially disappointing when one considers that the United States while at the same time in Japan and most European countries economic activity ran at a high level and production costs often rose more strongly than in the United

The bank noted that U.S. authorities have tried since late 1970 to moderate the international effects of the domestic easy-money policy by discouraging U.S. banks' repayments to overseas branches of dollar loans and by Export-Import Bank borrowings in Europe. (The U.S. Treasury borrowing now in progress came too late for inclusion in the report.)

But, the Bundesbank said, these measures have been largely in-effective. It said a solution would come only when U.S. interest rates rise or European rates fall, the latter of which occurred

Moeller in Washington

WASHINGTON, April 7 (AP-DJ). - West German Finance Minister Alex Moeller said today that Bonn's pledge in 1967 not to request U.S. gold in exchange for dollar holdings remains in effect. Mr. Moeller, here for talks with the U.S. Treasury Federal Reserve and the World Bank also spoke with some optimism about U.S. measures to prevent a continued dollar crisis in Europe notably such action as the Treasury and Export-Import Bank moves to absorb Eurodollars which otherwise would have to be taken up by the central banks of Western Europe. Mr. Moeller said he had been "assured that the United States is ready to exercise similar control also in the future." Mr. Moeller said he is convinced there is a need for what he called "improved control" of Eurodollar transactions and he urged European central banks to deal with this problem.

FRANKFURT, April 7 (Reuters).—The Bundesbank said today its operating profit last year rose 33 percent to 1.886 billion deutsche marks ($515.3 million) from 1.42 billion DM in 1969.

This left a net profit of 786 million DM, compared with no profit last year, of which 533.8 million DM went to the federal government, the sole shareholder, and the remainder was kept for banking purposes. The federal bank's foreign deposits and foreign money market investments were the largest item on the plus side of the balance sheet, rising to 28,362 billion DM by the end of last year, compared with 5.693 billion DM at the end of 1969. Gold holdings declined slightly to 14.34 billion DM from 14.7 billion DM.

The total of banknotes in circulation rose 5.4 percent to 36.48 billion DM from 34.617 billion

Economic Analysis

The Dollar: A Vietnam Casualty?

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, April 7 (WP).-Devaluation of the dollar? Revaluation of the West German mark? A new demand by European central banks for the right to turn back some of their dollars

None of these dramatic events may take place; but the fact that serious-minded officials here and abroad last week would even whisper of them as vague possibilities is a fact of momentous

It would appear that the major industrial rs of the Western world have for the moment again papered over an incipient international monetary crisis.

Dollar May Become War Casualty

But the underlying problem—a glut of dollars abroad—persists. And it begins to appear to many sober-minded U.S. experts that unless this country gets out of the Indochina war very soon, thus effectively choking off the flood of dollars abroad, the dollar itself might become a casualty of the

The war has been the single biggest contributor to the chronic U.S. balance-of-payments deficit. Total U.S. military expenditures overseas from 1965 through 1970, including Vietnam, have reached $25.2 billion, according to data recently compiled by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. In an effort to counteract this adverse payments effect, Washington has encouraged other governments to buy $7,2 billion in U.S. military hardware.

That still leaves about $18 billion as the net adverse effect from U.S. military operations overseas; a reasonable, conservative estimate is that well over half of that can be attributed to

The Military and Payments

In this same period, the U.S. balance of payments worsened by a cumulative total of $11.8 billion on the reserve settlements basis. So it is painfully clear that without Vietnam, the U.S. payments would be about in balance; to withdraw some troops from Europe, and also curtail military aid elsewhere would actually mean a

And none of these figures takes into account the "indirect" effect of war on the U.S. balance of payments: As inflation proceeds, high prices here attract an enormous volume of imports In Quarter at which thus cancel out or diminish the normal U.S. trade surplus. A most conservative expert says: "If we get out of the war, that would take care of it. If we don't get out of the war, [President] Nixon may have to devalue the dollar."

The Nixon administration, therefore, is being urged from within to take a much more serious view of the balance-of-payments problem than it has until now. The deficit last year swelled to $10.7 billion compared with a surplus of $2.7 billion in 1969. Unofficial, but reliable, guesses suggest a $6 billion deficit for 1971.

Treasury and Federal Reserve officials fear that the attitude within the White House-specifically, the views of adviser George Shuitz and some at the Council of Economic Advisershas been too casual up to now.

European central banks have not formed a line to change their dollars in for gold for a good reason: they have more than $20 billion in dollar accumulations (about $5 billion during the Nixon administration so far)-and there is only about $11 billion in gold in Fort Knox. No one wants to expose that real shortage, triggering a major crisis.

What Can Nixon Do?

What can Mr. Nixon do to save the dollar? He can end the war, better coordinate short-term money market rates to put a crimp in speculation. or, more important, do something tangible and seful about inflation.

He must also ignore the advice of those aides who are so preoccupied by monetary theory that they ignore the international consequences of excessively easy money. Tax and spending measures will have to be used to stimulate U.S. economic recovery.

"There is a growing feeling of uneasiness," says an international official, "but despite their worries, the Europeans-especially the Germans -will do almost anything to prevent the pot from boiling over. That presupposes, however, that your administration rejects this nonsensical notion of 'benign neglect'" of the payments

Sharp Drop in P&O Profits Philips' Sees Forecast by Outgoing Chief

By Harry Hobbs LONDON, April 7 (UPI).-The retiring chairman of the P & O group, the largest shipping complex in the Commonwealth, today forecast a 50 to 60 percent fall in profits this year after five years of steady gains. The news immediately wiped about £18 million ($43.2 million) off the paper value of the company on the stock market as the share price fell 36.1/2 pence. The group earned £12.6 million last

Chairman Sir Donald Anderson explained to shareholders in his annual statement that all the problems of shifting into container ships from conventional vessels and the huge industrywide increase in costs cannot be matched with equal speed by increased freight revenue.
"It will take time to restore a balance," he said. Long-Range Picture Sir Donald added that the evpected profit drop did not alter, in principle, the longer-term picture for the group.

Chase Says U.S. Must Alter Policy

The Nixon administration will have to change its economic policies if it wishes to reach its goal of a $1.065 billion gross national product this year, according to a Chase Manhattan Bank subsidiary, Chase Econometric Associates. The terget GNP cannot be reached without heavy government spending and tax incentives, in addition to the current policy of monetary ease, it said. However, such a policy revision would cause "a massive government deficit and create a greater potential for inflation, both of which may be unacceptable costs to the Nixon administration," it said. It predicted the GNP will total $1,046 billion, that 1971 will be the slowest postwar recovery year yet, that the consumer price index will rise at least 4 percent this year (well below the 5 1/2 percent 1970 rise) and that cor-perate profits after taxes should increase 12

Despite the longer-range outlook P & O shares dropped to 167.5 pence from 204 pence. Sir Donald called the new system of employing labor in the port of London "disastrous." Productivity has dropped 20 percent since September on exports and by 33.5 percent on imports, he charged. Loading costs for exports were up by 20 to 30 percent while discharging costs for imports climbed by 60 to 70 percent. Dock employers as well as the dockers shared the blame, he reported today a 22 percent drop in net 1970 earnings. Profit for last year fell to 116.4 million deutsche marks ($31.8 million) from the 150 million DM earned in 1969.

German Bank Reports 22% Fall in '70 Net

Total assets rose 13 percent to 31.432 billion DM from the yearearlier 27.735 billion DM. But the volume of credit outstanding rose a slim 3 percent, to 21.2 billion DM. Franz Heinrich Ulrich, an executive board spokesman, ascribed the relatively slow credit volume growth to Bonn's tight monetary policy. Mr. Ulrich said that the executive board had expected better profit results for 1970, although it had not expected to reach the level of 1969, which was an exceptionally good year. He cited soaring personnel costs and tougher competition, as well as the tight monetary policy, and said it is unlikely that there would be any essential difference between 1970 and 1971 profits.

Tube Investments

LONDON, April 7.-Tube Investments, the British engineering group, today reported 1970 pre-tax profits of £23 million ($55.2 million), up 18 percent from 1969.

The 1970 figure is after provision of £2.1 million for possible losses in connection with the Rolls-Royce bankruptcy. Without the extraordinary charge, gross income would have been £25.16 lion in 1969 and £13.78 million in the previous year.

Group sales rose by £48 million to £351 million last year.

American Stock Exchange Trading

If you don't know your way around the U.S.A., make sure your bank does.

The high rate of return realized by many overseas companies that have invested in the U.S.—plus the technological and marketing experience they've gained—is enough to whet the apperite of any businessman.

But while the successes have been spectacular, so have the failures. when investors have moved in without adequate investment and financial knowledge.

How do you get this knowledge? Trust Northern.

The Northern Trust Bank, located at the hub of U.S. business, has provided comprehensive corporate financial services to companies from coast to coast for more than three quarters of a century.

With this experience and our business contacts, we can help you determine which course is best suited to your individual objectives. If it is a joint venture or an acquisition, we can help you locate and evaluate candidates . . . perhaps from among the many corporations whose objectives have already been communicated to us. If another course is indicated, we can provide thorough financial consultation on the alternatives available.

For your business or personal investment management, our trust department—one of the largest in the country—can be of great assistance.

If the U.S. figures in your company's future, why not ask about The Northern Trust at your own bank. Or contact Kenneth P. Kinney, Vice President in our Chicago office, or W. James Armstrong, Vice President at our London branch.

Trust Northern... All your money matters matter to us.

BRIDGE.

If the opponents are threat-ening to score a trick with a ruff, it makes sense to remove trumps as quickly as possible. But there are exceptional cases in which this policy is a mistake, as South found to his cost in the diagramed deal from the recent Vanderbilt Kneckout Team Championship in Atlanta.

After a normal opening of one spade by South and a normal overcall of two diamonds by West, North made a negative double. Such doubles are used for take-out by many tournament players, showing length in the unbid suits. South accordingly bid two hearts.

West was Lew Mathe of Los Angeles, one of the great players and a member of one of the two United States teams in next month's world championship in Taipei. His intuition may have caused him to rebid his diamond suit, but such an action would be quite risky for lesser mortals. When North raised to four hearts, ending the auction, Mathe

led the club ace and continued with the four when East encouraged by playing the ten. South was eager to draw trumps. He played the ace and another and felt happy when West won the second round with the king. His happiness diminished rapidly when West cashed the diamond ace and led a third round of clubs, permitting East to heart jack. This good defense could have been countered if South had considered the significance of East's high-low play in clubs. As West had rebid diamonds and could be presumed to have four clubs, the trump length figured to be with East.

By Alan Truscott

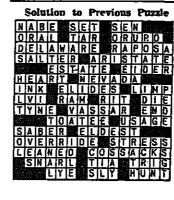

South had to assume that West held the heart king, for otherwise there was little hope. The actual distribution was not unlikely and South should have led a low trump instead of the ace. West would have had to put up his king and led a club to give South any problem, and he would solve it by overruffing East and

THE PERFECTIBILITY OF MAN By John Passmore. Scrioner's. 396 pp. $14.95.

Reviewed by Karl Hess

PERHAPS it takes a man writing from the detached distance of Australia (where he teaches at the National University) to do what John Passmore bas done in this book. First, he has studied his material thoroughly and organized it superbly, at a time when best sellers such as "The Greening of America" or "The Medium is the Message" rely on Delphic disor-der for their meanings, which are really moods.

Then he insists that every term, proposition, and concept of his book be clear—at a time when one operating phrase of people who say they think a lot about people or, even. The People, is "Well, if you don't understand, I can't tell you." Passmore is deeply concerned that people think about, feel con-cerned about, and understand what others have thought about the notion of human perfecti-bility. Finally, he comes down movingly and clearly on the side of reason, humanism, creative work and personal love at a time when style contends everywhere with content, when mysticism in new, often secular churches revives its old enmity to humanism. and when creativity and love often are replaced by pure play and ideology.

Passmore's own position builds throughout the book on the clear presentation, without polemic and without distortion, of whathas been written about the per-fectibility or imperfectibility of Man since Homeric Greece right up to Woodstock and The book builds categorically, but within each category it also builds chronologically so that every step of the way a full range of thoughts is presented. In the chapter on "Govern-mentalists, Anarchists and Geneticists." for instance. Helvetius. Skinner, Thoreau. Marx and Bakhunin, Nazis, Stalinists, Maoists, libertarians and liberals all are given their say, ending with Passmore's own high skenticism about social blueprints: "Marx's question. Who shall educate the educators?' ... can be extended to Who shall reform the reformers?'... It is one thing to say that the mechanisms for perfecting men are now at our disposal; it is quite another thing to say that they will in fact be used in order to perfect men. This is what the anarchists pointed out... [But] perfection is no more to be expected from the destruction of existing social institutions than from their extension and their strengthening . . . '

Passmore believes in perfection as a process rather than as a goal which imperfect men can, or should, describe. But he scarcebelieves in any despair or in any status quo reverence. Science and art, he points out, "are by their-very nature revolutionary, destructive of established orders." They also should be part and parcel of what he regards as useful, human work. as opposed to onerous, alienated

"Men," he writes, "almost certainly, are capable of more than they have ever so far achieved But what they achieve, or so I have suggested, will be a con-sequence of their remaining anxious, passionate, discontented human beings." Does that mean uptightness? Hardly. He writes passionately against the possession of people by their possessions, against "vi-ciously competitive individual-ism," against "an intense seriousness of purpose, wholly hostile to wit, irony or any kind of secret smile," and against body-Puritanism and moralism.

But does it mean, on the other hand, pure counter-culture escap-ism, mysticism, or hedonism? Hardly. He writes, for instance of the important difference between play and love, work and toil: "To love is to take delight in the continuing existence of an object, to find it beautiful, to rejoice in its oualities and struc ture and—when this lies withit our power—to help 'it survit develop ... It involves e joyment of the object as it no is—love without enjoyment. We the no element of play in it, is, sis I said no longer love but toll When a man loves a woman he does not merely like looking at her, or enjoy his own relation-ship with her: he cares about her as an individual, he suffers and rejoices with her... A mother loves herself rather than her children if she will not grant them freedom... Love is closely connected with taking pride in one's work, as distinct from being proud of oneself as its creator ...

"Mystical perfectibilism an attempt to find a way of life. which is purely play, devoid of care. It rejects as valueless both games and love... It permits tell, but only that species of toil which is a stage in the progress toward the mystical union. Or else it thinks of toll as the proper way of life only for the Marthas of this world, for those who are not fit for the higher kinds of spirituality."

Passmore also bucks a current tide by seeing technology as hopeful, depending on how men use it.

What Passmore does, then is to put the hopefulness of science and the lovingness of art together with a sense of human community (on a real rather than ritual scale), together with love and care for the real people and real things of a real world. From the mixture, he derives people who are self - sufficient enough "to do without such solaces as reputation and status. And from that, anyone reading this fine book should derive a renewed sense of human possibility, of the revolutionary adventure of reconstructing this world to the uses of people rather than to the wastage of pomo. power, profit and those spooky "pseudo-loves" in whose names rulers continue to kill and to rampage, to rape and to loot.

Appeals Court Strikes Out Flood's Suit

NEW YORK, April 7 (UPI) .-The U.S. Court of Appeals today struck out Curt Flood's challenge to organized baseball's reserve clause in an opinion filed in Pederal Court.

The court upheld an opinion by Federal Judge Irving Ben Cooper, which had dismissed Flood's complaint alleging that the reserve clause violated federal and state anti-trust laws. Flood sat out the 1969 season forgoing a $100,000 salary when he was traded from the St. Louis Cardinals to the Philadelphia Phillies and filed suit against commissioner Bowie Kuhn and organized baseball on four grounds. One of the main reasons for dismissing the action followed a previous Supreme Court decision by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes holding that organized baseball was not subject to anti-trust laws because it was not involved in interstate commerce.

Flood can now take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if he

ing a black golfer in the Mas-ters." Cliff Roberts, guiding genius behind the world-famed tournament, said today at a press conference scheduled for the promotion of the "Golf's Tribute to Ike" campaign.

Roberts predicted that a black golfer would qualify for the Masters in the near future and said he expected that there would be a black Masters champion in the near future "The sooner one qualifies the happier we will be," he added.

Roberts pointed out that nearly every year a black golfer has been nominated by the champions committee for an invitation but has never been elected. It was disclosed later that Lee Elder of Washington and Pete Brown of Los Angeles both received votes in this year's election.

The champions committee selection this year was Homera Blancas. This is the only category, except for the foreign players for which a player does not have to qualify in actual competition. Roberts pointed out that Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants is one of the most popu-iar athletes in the United States and that a black player of his ilk would be a boon to the Masters. "We actually increased the number of qualifying positions this year in hope that one of the black players would make it." Roberts added.

When asked why a black player hadn't been given a free pass, Roberts replied, "Inviting black player because he is black is an insult rather than a compliment."

Roberts disclosed that seven "Golf's Tribute to Ike" booths have been installed on the Augusta course for spectators. Proceeds from the campaign will toward the Eisenhower Medical Clinic in Palm Springs, Calif., and to the Eisenhower College

Revised Stanley Cup Setup Not Expected to Halt Bruins

NEW YORK, April 7 (AP).-Eight teams begin the annual chase for the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup tonight under a revised playoff setup which the league hopes will produce the best match-up for the final round.

The Stanley Cup finals matching East and West Divisions have ended in four-game sweeps in each of the last three seasons with Montreal twice and Boston once eliminating St. Louis in the minimum number of games.

This year, the divisions will cross over at the semi-final stage. That means the winner of the Montreal-Boston East series will meet the St. Louis-Minnesota survivor from the West and the New York-Toronto East winner will go against the Chicago Philadelphia West survivor. Driver Beltoise Gets Reinstated By French Group

PARIS, April 7 (UPI) .- The French Federation of Automobile Sports announced today it is restoring the driving license of French driver Jean-Pierre Beltoise three months after he was involved in the death of Italian driver Ignazio Giunti in the Buenos Aires 1,000-kilometer race last January. The federation meeting to decide Beltoise's case, said he had been effectively barred from driving since Jan. 11, the day after the accident. His license was provisionally withdrawn Feb. 10, after he returned to France, and therefore, in effect, Beltoise was suspended for three months.

The lifting of the suspension will enable Beltoise to race in the Spanish Grand Prix April 18. Beltoise is provisionally free on bond of 3 million pesos ($1,000) while Argentine judicial authorities investigate the circumstances of Giunti's death. Beltoise has been charged with involuntary Giunti was killed when his Ferrari 512, coming out of a turn. hit the rear of the Matra-Simca which Beltoise was pushing across the track after he ran out of broken arm.

TV in World War II

Richard Nixon said recently that the Vietnam war would probably be the last war the United States would ever fight. He's probably right.

The reason for it is television. It's obvious no country can ever fight a war again if its television commentators keep interviewing enlisted men about the battle. I thought of this the other evening as I watched several enlisted men talking to a television correspon-dent in Vietnam. My mind went back to World Buchwald War II. and I tried to imagine what the guys in my Marine Corps outfit would have said if someone had stuck a microphone in their faces and started filming their reactions to landing in the Marshall Islands. "This is Terry Bartlett here at Eniwetok with the U.S. Marines. Standing next to me is Cpl. Zeth Kingbury, of Zenith, Tennessee. How's it going, corporal?" "It's going real bad. I don't know if we can hold out the night with the ammunition we have.

What is your name, sir?" "Pfc Roger Bernstein, of Brooklyn, New York." Roger, do you think the United States should have tried to take The Japs are dug in and we're getting a lot of heavy fire."

Eniwetok?" "No. it was a mistake. Washington doesn't know what's going on. We're taking a lot of casualties out here for a worthless piece

"Then you don't think you should be here? "No. sir. I really don't. And

No Hot Pants

For Princess Anne LONDON, April 7 (AP).-Princess Anne delivered a royal thumbs down on hot pants today. She says she won't wear them, come what may. The 20-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, known for her trendy clothes, says in a taped television interview to be broadcast Sunday night, "That's the limit, the absolute limit. Certain things I will not do."

"How's the morale of the troops?"

"It's not good. We haven't had a warm meal in three days, and there are flies everywhere. We have to sleep in foxholes, and the heat is flerce in the daytime. I have nothing good to say about this place." "What's your name?" "Private Tony D'Amate, of Tony, why do you think President Roosevelt insisted on an invasion of Eniwetok"

"It's hard to say. I've been against Roosevelt's strategy from the start. We should be bombing Tokyo and Osaka instead of wasting our time on these islands. I also think we should forget about Europe and concentrate everything in the Pacific. After all, the Japs bombed Pearl Harbornot the Germans,"

"What is your name?"
"Pic Tim O'Brien, Waco, Texas." "How do you size up this operation. Tim?"

"I think all we're doing is try-ing to make General MacArthur look good. He lost the Philippines, and now the Marines have to get it back for him. Most of the guys in this outfit are pretty about always having to bail out the Army. We're thinking about getting a petition together to send to our congressmen complaining about doing everybody's dirty work."

. . . "And your name, sir?" "Pfc Charles Hildegard, Butte,

"What do you do?" "I'm a cook." "How do you see the big picture?" "It seems to me that Admiral Nimitz is not getting maximum effort out of the Pacific Fleet. I would replace Admiral Hasley with a younger man and bring more pressure on the Japs by Air Force strikes on Truk and Okinawa. The Pacific command knows I have never been for taking Eniwetok."

"Thank you. And so you have heard from the men of VMF 113 on Eniwetok. They are all agreed that nothing could be gained by this invasion. Whether they are correct or not, only time will tell. This is Terry Bartlett in the Marshall Islands."

Peter Boyle, as "Joe," the title character of a film, a loutish bluecollar worker who beiches a lot.

Success of 'Joe' And an Actor Named Peter Boyle

PARIS.—Possibly the biggest sleeper of the past year is "Joe," an American film whose title character is a loutish bluecollar worker who beiches a lot, pronounces orgy with a hard "g," loves guns, and hates hipples, pinkoes and queers. "42 percent of all liberals are queers," he grunts. "That's a fact. The Wallace people took a poll."

"Joe" became a hit and so did Peter Boyle, who plays him. Before "Joe," Mr. Boyle was, as one critic put it. "compar-atively unknown." "I think that's charitable." Mr. Boyle says.

Since "Joe" he has started with Candice Bergen in Herbert Ross's "T.R. Baskin," which he describes as "Hollywood, the Hollywood establishment. It was very plea-He will next appear in "Steelyard Blues." a film with Jane Fonda. Donald Sutherland and director Alan Myerson that he is really excited about. The four just worked together entertaining GIs at Fort Bragg, N.C.

"People thought it a !ittle strange that I would play Joe and do an anti-war show." he says. Much of his Fort Bragg material was the sort of thing he used to do at Chicago's famous Second City.

Peter Boyle is tell and heavyset, with a bald pate and sharp, lively features. He hadn't really expected suddenly to be treat-ed as a star in his mid-30s—"I thought I'd have a nice career, be a good character man"-and isn't at all sure what to do about it.

Publicity

He came to Paris for a pre-premiere promotion of "Joe." "I thought it might do me good to get publicity in Paris," he explained. Why? "I don't know," he answered helplessly. He also did interviews in London and ordered a bespoke suit, the first suit he will have worn in

The success of "Joe" is a curious and not entirely pleasant phenomenon. As a film it is undistinguished. What it does offer is a selection of people to detest: Joe the violent, brutal hard-hat type, a weak liberal advertising executive father yes, advertising executives are back in movies, at least in some movies!), and a group of arrogant and repellent hippies. "The picture has been overpraised or unjustly condemned." Peter Boyle says.

"Some of the implications of its success are Orwellian—remember Hate Week?

Mary Blume

What it really is," he adds, "is an exploitation picture."

Since "Joe" people have evinced surprise that Mr. Boyle speaks proper English, doesn't belch, and doesn't care much for guns. "All I know about guns," he says, "is to keep the safety catch on."

When he was invited to audition for "Joe." Feter Boyle was doing pretty well in TV commercials, a field he liked. "A lot of them give you a chance to act, improvise and be creative." Until then, the going was rough.

"Everyone asks how it feels to be a success," Mr. Boyle recited, though he hadn't been asked. "It's really a drag. Beautiful women. Fast cars. High living. It's not what it's cracked up to be. I long for the simple life—obscurity, quiet despair. I miss the total misery, the simple misery of the old days." Pleased with this speech, he thought he might try it on the French press.

Born in Philadelphia, Peter Boyle lives on New York's West Side. A press hand-out says he played in Sidney Lumet's "The Group," but he only put that in to please the flacks. "I worked one day. I was an extra." Most of his time has been spent looking for work.

No Work

"It wasn't that I couldn't find work on Broadway. I couldn't find work at all." The first good sign came when, at 30, he went to collect his last unemployment check and learned that day that he had been hired for "The Odd Couple," with which he toured in a supporting role for

"When I decided to be an actor, I went to New York for the usual round of starvation—no, not really starvation, I don't look like starvation—deprivation and inner hunger of the cruelest kind." The statement, properly hollow-voiced, was slightly ruined by the fact that Mr. Boyle made it with a potato chip in his mouth. If the effect of time, success and psychotherapy have made Peter Boyle able to laugh at the past, he did go through the kind of hell that makes other people wonder how tyro actors can stick it out. "After five years you reach a point of despair." he says. "You have been rejected so much you say, I will not be denied." At this poignant and important point of his career, there is a lot Peter Boyle can and does say. It could all be summed up in one relieved sentence. "The thing I feel now is I really have a chance to work.'
